When the steamer Chattanooga pulled away from the wharf Tuesday afternoon she floated all the flags of the allied nations from the hurricane deck, with a big American flag at the mast waving in the breeze. Over 500 people were on board and most of them were convalescent soldiers. The them were convaicable to solders. AT THE TERMINAL STATION FEARED WIFE'S WHITE SHINGLE CANTEEN HUT

Appropriate exercises this evening marks the completion of the ut where Red Cross workers will serve troops passing through and leaving town.

The canteen hut which has just been finished at the Terminal station will be opened to the public this afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock. Prayer will be offered by Dr. J. W. Bachman. Rev. T. S. McCallie, chairman of the local Red Cross, will make a short talk. Mrs. T. H. McClure, president of the Junior league, which is doing canteen work for the Red Cross, will briefly outline the work the league is doing to the public.

The hut consists of three rooms, a kitchen with white enemal sink, a gas range and a large, conspicuous coffee percolator; a supply room and a hospital room, besides toilet rooms. The hut is built of large, white shingles and is located at the side of the left driveway of the station. It is so constructed that serving may be done through the windows.

OLD MEN GOOD "SUB" HUNTERS

They Fit Into Their Niche in Winning the War - Much Praise for Their Work.

London.—(N. E. A.)—The old man has come back, not only in work behind the lines but in the front lines against the Hun submarines. Age has no limits when it comes to stalking the U-boats.

U-boats.

When the war broke out, the admiralty was besieged by retired admirals, vice-admirals and rear-admirals for service against the Huns. They were too old to be placed in their former commanding ranks, but many were only too happy to be placed as captains and commanders in charge of armed yachts to hunt U-boats.

The work of these men has won praise and honors from the government. They have combed the sea for mines, have sunk the sneaking U-boats, and have kept clear the lanes of commerce.

One of the exploits of these old mer One of the exploits of these old men that is going the rounds of the naval clubs tells of how one captain brought his yacht over the spot where a U-boat had disappeared. He exploded a depth charge and the water became covered with black and greasy matter. The enemy's periscope suddenly appeared about 300 yards away, but a well-placed shot finished the job.

MORE THAN HUNGER WORRIES JAPANESE

Many Hate Terauchi and Object to Taking Any Greater Part in War.

Washington, . Aug. 21 .- Press reports of serious rioting in all parts of Japan, necessitating the calling out of troops, amazed the state department. situation.

Japanese Ambassador Ishii, of Japan, to whom the World correspondent conveyed the news, declined to talk. Although the dispatches speak of rice riots, men here who know Japa-nese politics are inclined to believe the trouble is deeper than mere hunger. There is strong opposition in the diet to the present government, headed by Gen. Terauchi, former governor of Ko-rea. In fact, the government is said to be the most unpopular since Japan has had a constitution.

Rice Situation Deemed Pretext, There is a strong sentiment against taking a greater participation in the war. Some parties have strenuously opposed intervention in Siberia. It has been said, on the other hand, that has been said, on the other hand, that the only thing that would save the Terauchi ministry would be active military operations. Men here familiar with conditions see in the outbreaks an expression of the sentiment against more active military participation in the war, the rice situation having been used by those responsible for the ricts as a pretext.

Japan has kept her engagements as an ally of Great Britain to the letter, an ally of Great Britain to the letter, it is pointed out. The Anglo-Japanese agreement does not call for military action outside the Orient and the Pacific. Japanese leaders are known to be not particularly keen about engaging in extensive military operations in Siberia or elsewhere without positive assurance of compensation. The agreement under which Japan is sending troops to support the Czecho-Slovaks makes no provision for compensation. In many respects Japanese statesmen from the outset have looked at the war in large measure as a business proposition.

As for rice riots, they have not been

As for rice riots, they have not been infrequent in the past, but the latest outburst appears to have been much more serious than any before. The poor of Japan have not been benefited by the war, while it has added largely to the wealth of the well-to-do classes and developed many millionaires.

and developed many millionaires.

If there is nothing behind the present riots but hunger and high rice prices, it is believed they will be speedily ended. The fact that the emperor and wealthy Japanese have made large contributions and the price of rice already has gone down would seem to uphold the theory that there is little in the way of politics behind the riots.
